BEST BET: Race 9 - #5 Steady Earner

This horse has been right there in several of his recent races, while also running against better. He gets a drop in class today, and also gets a notable jockey change, picking up Luis Saez, who should fit him perfectly. He will have to run his race today, but I think that he is in the perfect spot and should be tough to beat given the company he has recently been keeping.

LONGSHOT: Race 6 - #5 Sweepeno

This filly has had trouble at the start of both of her races, and yet last time rallied to finish a solid third. Today she is stretching out in distance to go two turns for the first time, and I'm hoping with the added real estate and a cleaner break we will see an even better effort from her. In addition, there does not seem to be a lot of pace signed on in this race, and that should bode well for a horse stretching out who will likely show more speed.
