BEST BET: Race 3 - #6 Topsy Kitten

Taking a significant drop in class today, this horse looks like he's in the perfect spot to get back to the winners circle. In addition, I think that he has the potential to be the controlling speed in here for trainer Dave Fawkes, but also has the ability to settle nicely if need be. He looks like he has a slight class edge and is the one to beat in here.

LONGSHOT: Race 1 - #3 Not Nice

This mare has been right there at this level in her last two, but I think that race flow will be in her favor today. Also, she had legitimate excuses and traffic trouble in her two most recent races, but clearly has the ability to be tactical and should sit a great trip today. She's a true turf sprinter and has shown with her good recent races that she is competitive at this level.
